OTTAWA, Sept. 5.—(Canada Press)—In preparation for the coming federal election campaign a meeting of the National Liberal organization committee has been called by Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Liberal leader. The meeting will be held in Ottawa on Tuesday, September 13, and delegates will be in attendance from all the provinces. Organizational work will be planned and

A Scotch Opinion
LONDON, Sept. 2. — (Canadian Press Cable)—The Glasgow Herald, discussing the Canadian election situation, says: the general lack of vitality characterizing Canadian politics during the past two years is due mainly to the

to the inability of the new forces to find expression either through the present government, whose mandate dates back to 1917, or through the opposition whose program seems wide-bound within limits fixed by the controversy of pre-war days. The main importance of a general election, the newspaper adds, lies in the success likely to be attained by the farmers, and to lesser degree by the state. A purely class government, as represented by the farmers' party, would necessarily be something of a novelty, the Herald contends, and a certain circumstance might be dangerous to the stability of the state. Premier Melchior has raised this issue.

precisely, the paper concludes, and the program of the campaign will show how far Canada assents to this doctrine or whether the majority of citizens are prepared to risk the experiment of an administration representing only one element of the community.

Railway for Smith Portage

The mineral development now in progress at various points on Great Slave lake demands the necessity of a railway across the Smith portage. Beyond the portage lies Slave lake and the mineral resources of the area. The portage is a narrow strip of land, and the railway would be a valuable asset to the area. The portage is a narrow strip of land, and the railway would be a valuable asset to the area. The portage is a narrow strip of land, and the railway would be a valuable asset to the area.

So far as the oil of the MacKenzie valley is concerned, it cannot be economically transported to the outside world by steamers using the Smith portage route. There must be rail and pipeline connection or the cost of haul would absorb the market price of the product. There must be large development before the great investment necessary to give rail and pipeline connection will be made. That development will require large quantities of heavy machinery—many thousands of tons in fact. Whatever can be done to reduce the cost and lessen the delay in getting that machinery to the MacKenzie oil fields will hasten the day when the world will be selling oil to the west instead of buying it, as at present. A railway across the Smith portage would do more than anything else at the moment to hasten the development of the MacKenzie oil fields.

But aside altogether from the oil field of the MacKenzie the mineral deposits now being developed on Great Slave lake render necessary the portage railway if they are to be productive. The prospects are that the oil and gas fields near Pine Point, on the south shore of the lake, is in itself ample justification for the building of the portage railway.

In the winter of 1898, during the rush to the Klondike, a prospector entering the area in the course of a moose hunt, discovered a vein of galena south of Sulphur Point and east of the Big Buffalo river. From time to time the existence of this galena has been confirmed. Active prospecting and development work have been in progress during the present and past seasons by the Great Slave Lake Syndicate of Boston. A party of seven men is at work this season under the direction of C. B. Dawson, resident engineer. J. McIntosh Bell, a relative of the late Dr. Bell of the Canadian geological survey, is the consulting geologist. A mining company has also staked claims, but so far has done no actual development work. All parties agree that there is a large body of ore. It contains zinc as well as lead, but little or no silver. The ore is rich in lead. It would have to be refined at the mine, as it is not sufficiently valuable to stand shipment to a refinery. But if refined the lead would stand shipment provided there was a railway across the portage. No doubt crude oil could be used for smelting. If a strike is made at Windy Point, the oil could not be more conveniently located. If it had to be brought from Norman it would still be cheap. If electric power is needed for any purpose, there is plenty to be easily developed on the Big Buffalo river within twenty miles of the mine. On the Big Buffalo river, within 10 miles of the galena property. It is about seven miles back from the lake shore.

During the present summer several silver-lead claims have been staked up on the Riviere du Rocher, that runs into Slave lake a few miles eastward of the delta of the Slave river. This find is said to be quite rich in silver, but no development work is yet in progress. Gold is not so heavy to transport as lead, and if the Aurore company, working on Caribou island, realize their expectations, the marketing of their output will not be impeded, whether there is a railway across the portage or not. This company, backed by Tacoma capital, has been prospecting on Caribou island, at the entrance to the north arm of the lake, for several years. This season they have taken down a steam mill and will have an output of about 100 tons of gold. The results are as expected, there will be a big expansion of development next season that will call for improved transportation facilities across the portage.

The formation lying between the east and north arms of the lake is an extension of that found along the Coppermine river, which empties into Coronation Gulf, on the Arctic coast. That there is copper in the area mentioned adjacent to the lake, there is no doubt. It has been reported in paying quantities. Further exploration, however, might reveal other minerals that would further add to the economic importance of the Great Lake.

Windfall Point are very promising. So far the drill has not struck oil. A stratum of salt has been reached. It is held by some that oil is not found below salt. But the presence of salt at one point by no means proves that oil does not exist in the locality. Should a strike be made at Windy Point, the whole oil situation would be changed. For Windy Point is not more 350 miles almost due north of Peace River town, and being on Slave lake, is much more accessible than the Norman field, 500 miles further down the Mac-Kenzie. While a standard railway across the Smith portage would be in the advance of present need, if it were built it would give assurance of transportation to prospectors and investors. Without which they must hesitate to spend time or money on northern development. The river will always be there. There must be a railway across if the country is ever developed. Then why not build it now, when its building would so greatly aid development?

The Sectional Appeal

The leader of the National Progressive party pleases to be funny when he says: "I trust that the 'contest' will be free from appeals 'to sectional, racial or religious 'prejudices.' A party that finds reason for existence in class organization and its ideal of administration in joint government by inherently hostile groups is scarcely in a position to protest successfully against 'sectional, racial or 'religious' appeals'."

The Last Resort?

Toronto printers held a prayer meeting in the labor temple, to pray for the success of their strike on a 44-hour week. Why not if they think their cause is just there is surely nothing inappropriate in praying for its success. Nor is it employers taking the same course if they feel that they are in the right in resisting the demand. It is not a matter of prayer, but of the printers only took to prayer after they had been out of work for three months.

Cars Or Busses?

The new transportation commission which is to operate the Toronto street railway on behalf of the city is buying some motor busses, and will give them a try out in competition with the cars. The aim apparently is to give the rivals a thorough test as to their comparative efficiency. The experiment, if not the first of the kind tried in Canada, is on the largest scale, and Toronto affords conditions for a trial thorough to the point of conclusiveness. The result will be watched with interest by street railway companies and the public in all parts of the Dominion. Even in Toronto the interest will hardly be more than in Edmonton, whose taxpayers have tied up several millions in a civic street railway system which has not been financially successful. If the results should show that the street railway is a "has been" in cheapness of operation and efficiency of service the people of both cities will be given something to think about.

Rationing the Reds

The American famine relief organization has got into action, and is distributing ship loads of food to the hungry in the Russian cities. While the peasants are said to be as about as desperate straits as the townfolk, the transportation system of the country is so hopeless and the need in the cities so great that the rural population is likely to get little of the supplies sent. That the relief effort, however well directed and generously supported, can do any more than fight starvation in the centres of population accessible by railway is hard to be apposed. These centres of course are the headquarters of the Soviet strength, the dwelling places of the red element, and the breeding grounds of world revolutionary sentiment. The Reds seem therefore to be first in the bread line, with small chance that the available supply will satisfy their wants and leave anything over for the villagers and farmers. From the outset and the outside it looks as though the relief work is pretty likely to be confined of necessity to supplying rations to the Reds in the cities while their victims in the outlying districts starve.

The Real Reason

Premier Meighen's argument in defence of an election without redistribution is neither logical nor convincing. With the enumeration finished and the result available by December the only real reason for not holding a redistribution election is that the government cannot depend on the support of the House to pass a redistribution bill. Constitutional practice and fair play to the country demands that when a redistribution is due it shall be made without delay. To refuse redistribution and call an election at the very time when the redistribution is due and every-thing is in order for it to be made, is unbecomingly of Canadian politics during the half century since Confederation. By refusing redistribution before an election Premier Meighen places party exigency above constitutional right. It is only fair to say that he was always willing and ready to do that, as a supporter and colleague of the late premier Sir Robert Borden. As Premier he is only doing what he had always before endorsed.

But why is Premier Meighen so sure of defeat in the present election that he will break all constitutional right and precedent in order to avoid meeting it? He had a fair working majority during the last session. Nothing has since come to the surface to indicate any change in the measure of support he would receive at a coming session. True, there are difficulties inseparable from a redistribution of seats. But such difficulties always exist and must be faced sometime. After all, there should be some regard paid to constitutional right.

The demand for an election in advance of redistribution was first voiced by the Montreal Gazette. A truly conservative paper in the best and broadest sense, as well as a leading supporter of the Meighen government. The Gazette speaks for a large section of the financial interests of the country. It is a spokesman of Big Business. The fact is that the business conditions of Canada, together with governmental finances, have reached a crisis. An exposure of those conditions on the floor of parliament would so utterly discredit the policy and administration of the government that it could not hope for success when its appeal was finally made; no matter how the constitutionality had been gerrymandered by redistribution.

The drop in August bank clearings throughout Canada—with four exceptions—tells the tale of restricted trade. Less trade means falling national revenue and swelling national railway deficits. The closed factories, the vast and widespread condition of unemployment in mid-summer is clear proof that the policy and administration of the government has not been for the good of Canada. The premier cannot afford to have the bald facts made known before an election, therefore he brings it on before they are known, or before they are understood. The chances of his government are not so good now. They would be much worse after the next budget was placed before parliament.

If by setting East against West—which he is being ably assisted by his former colleague Mr. Croxall—he is able to secure a majority in a new parliament he will at least be able to ask the people of Canada what they are going to do about it. If he fails in the election he is still no worse off.

taking his own word for it—that he would have had no face the house.

The Premier appeals to the country on a question of policy—the question of high and higher tariff. That has been the policy of his party and of himself for the past ten years. Under that policy and under the administration of his colleagues and himself, the country has been brought to a point when constitutional right must be set aside in order that the conditions of the country be such that he and they may have a chance of retaining power. It is time for a change.

First on the Appetite List

ONCE the crispness and charm of Grape-Nuts have been tested by the family, there's one item that stands prominently out in the marketing list thereafter.

That's Grape-Nuts.

The twenty hours of continuous baking have produced, from the natural richness of wheat and malted barley, a food that is uniquely sweet with sugar developed from the grains themselves, and whose crispness and flavor make a delightful appeal to every member of the family.

And Grape-Nuts is soundly nourishing—a great builder of health and strength.

Served with cream or milk, as a cereal for breakfast or lunch, or made into a pudding for dinner.

See that your marketing list includes this delicious, economical food, today. All grocers.
